CAPTURED BY CHIEFPfender Arrests Four Having Miniature Distillery in Possession.

Frank McCormick, Clyde McCormick, Mollie Roulen and Mrs. Adele McCormick, wife of the former, all of Detroit, spent Monday night behind the bars in the Mishawaka jail on a charge of the unlawful possession and transporting of 70 quarts of Canadian liquor into American territory.

The arrest was a clever piece of work on the part of Chief of Police Pfender and adds another laurel to the attainments of Mishawaka's chief of police.

The arrest of the quartet took place two miles southeast of Mishawaka yesterday afternoon. The chief was "out for a search" and encountered the Paige automobile in the hills. The machine was resting. Assuming the look of a weary traveler Chief Pfender sat down on the roadside and solicitously asked about the trouble. "We have had rotten luck," ventured one of the women, "one of the parts of the car has gone wrong and we have sent a man into Mishawaka to get a new one to replace it."

"Is that so?" inquired the chief. "Yes, and isn't it rotten luck," again ventured the woman. "What have you in these suit cases and traveling bags to make them look so bulky?" asked the inquiring officer.

"Oh nothing, nothing," was the ready response. "Let's see," said Pfender, whereupon he started to get busy. "Horror! Seventy quarts of real old Guggenheim and Hiram Walker, Canadian rye whisky were skillfully stowed away in three suit cases, two traveling bags and one double lunch bag."

He was up. There were no further explanations. The "black Maria" was within hailing distance and soon the hootch owners were enroute to the police station where the former admitted they were on their way from Detroit to South Bend.

Federal Prohibition Agent Harry R. This will be the first seizure of any car under the circumstances in this county, Mr. Mathers said.

Secrets of the Movies Revealed

Q—How much detail should there be in a photoplay synopsis?

A—The synopsis is the original story and is chiefly concerned with the plot. The scenario writer should therefore limit his synopsis to such details as are germane to the development of the plot. Make the plot and your meaning clear and leave the details and their interpretations to the continuity writer and the director. The synopsis deals chiefly with plot, while the continuity (which most producers prefer to have prepared by their experts) is chiefly detail. Incidents or bits of business which you think might help the story can be safely inserted but be very careful not to crowd your synopsis with too many of them. Remember that your chief function as a scenario writer is the turning out of a strong and unusual plot.

Q—What well known screen actor who specializes in movie detective and police roles was a real detective before going into films?

A—Dewitt Jennings is the one who jumped from gum shoes and false whiskers to the movies.

Q—What pretty screen actress who was famous for her horse riding ability and her vehement assertions that she would never marry is now one of the screen's newest brides?

A—Kathleen O'Connor is now Mrs. Lyn Reynolds. Kathleen succumbed to Cupid's wiles after two years courtship. The happy couple met two years ago in the Fox studios. Her husband is a director for Tom Mix.

Q—Who is the newest movie actress to gain her freedom via the divorce court?

A—Ethel Broadhurst was given a divorce by a California judge when she told him that her husband, who is a hotel man, had deserted her.

Q—Has Lloyd Hughes a brother in the movies?

A—Lloyd's younger brother Earle will soon make his screen debut in a Lois Weber picture.

How many Mary Pickfords are there in the movies?

You will be interested in the answer to this question which will appear in this department tomorrow. The Movie Secrets editor will be glad to answer any questions if you will address him in care of this paper, giving your name and address.

Answer to Subscriber:—Maurice Costello has left the films for married life.

Florence Reed has been out of pictures but will return soon.

BLACKSTONE

The humor and sentiment of "Boys Will Be Boys" hits every type of human being that makes up the average attendance of the picture theaters. The story of the village ne'er-do-well who was born in an orphan asylum and never knew the joys of childhood, will make an irresistible appeal to boys and will stir the heart of every man, no matter what his age. Women will revel in the tender sentiment of the love tale that runs through the picture like a golden thread. The children will enjoy the delightful scene in which Peep O'Day renounces his youth and becomes a boy again, stealing marbles with the barefoot kids of the village, playing train robber, and distributing striped candy by the bushel.

Most theater goers of South Bend will remember Will Rogers when he appeared in person in this city twirling a rope and cracking "wise" in a manner peculiarly his own. After that he became a permanent feature in Ziegfeld's Follies, and then Goldwyn introduced him as the most popular star in pictures. "Boys Will Be Boys" is another of the remarkable actor's unforgettable characteristics. Other pictures to be seen on the same program are latest international News, Victory parade in Paris, which is developed in the beautiful Prima way, and a two reel western picture entitled, "Under Suspicion" starring Eileen Sedgwick.

Mr. Jack King, the popular Chicago tenor, who is otherwise known as "The Man With The Golden Voice," was well received by Blackstone audiences yesterday, singing the world famous ballad "Silver Threads Among The Gold" and popular songs. Mr. King will finish his engagement next Sunday night. Miss Mae Hughes, Chicago's popular soprano has been engaged by Mr. Berkson to open a two weeks' engagement at the Blackstone, starting next Monday. Miss Hughes has been singing in some of the finest theaters and hotels in Chicago, recently appearing at the Drake hotel, which is claimed to be one of the finest hotels in the country.

Russell in the role of an Iron Rider, gives a good account of himself in a picture that is intensely interesting from start to finish. Appearing opposite the star are Vola Vale and George Nichols. A very funny sunshine comedy, "The Night Before" and "The Gumps" are added features. Tomorrow and Thursday, "Polly of the Storm Country" will be the offering, starring Mildred Harris, formerly the wife of Charlie Chaplin, the world's greatest comedienne.
